

Changing lives by establishing Bible schools throughout the world

WORLD OUTREACH

ACCEPTING THE CALL

When Lisa Cree was questioning whether God truly wanted her and her husband, Chris, to open a Charis Bible College in Dumfries, Scotland, she said, “Surely, you’ve asked others, we aren’t your plan A.” God’s response to her was, “When you say yes, you become My plan A.”

Chris and Lisa Cree had been believers for fifteen years. They were both born again, but felt saved and stuck, like there was very little power operating in their lives. They wondered why they weren’t seeing the miracles spoken of in the book of Acts and were dissatisfied when told that those miracles passed away with the apostles. Upon hearing Andrew’s “How to Stay Positive in a Negative World” teaching, they felt they needed to know more. They wanted the fruits they’d seen in the pages of Acts.

“It felt like I had a jigsaw puzzle, but I didn’t have a sketch or a picture of what it looked like, and I couldn’t see how to put the pieces together,” Chris says. “When I started listening to Andrew, I knew enough of the Bible that everything he said was Scripture, Scripture, Scripture . . . but it was like he took the jigsaw and said, ‘Put this piece here and that piece there,’ and all of a sudden I could see the big picture.”

“WHEN YOU SAY YES, YOU BECOME MY PLAN A.”

Chris and Lisa were in Charis’s 2013 graduating class and chose the Ministry School for their third year. During their overseas missions trip to the U.K., they started hearing a calling to open an extension school in Scotland - a calling that grew stronger when they found Creetown and the River Cree and discovered Chris likely had ancestors from that area.

Almost three years passed before their move to Scotland. They took three trips there to scout the land and find a location. God pointed them to a 150-year-old property that used to be a medical facility. It had been vacant for several years, and four other college campuses are on site.

A conference center next to the school is where Andrew Wommack will be holding a meeting in June.

“We have a lot of favor, God’s just gone before us,” Chris says. The Crees received multiple prophecies and words from various people that all said God would “pave” the way for them. And that’s what He did, allowing them to just roll into this new phase of ministry.

In that time before they moved, Lisa worked on the events team for AWM and God cultivated her talent for creating good environments. When they did move, and Chris was appointed director in 2016, Lisa used her gift to make their building a place for students to learn and grow.

Lisa explains, “I want [the students] to come in here and I want them to feel a spirit of excellence, a spirit of warmth and invitation so they can just relax and receive from God when they hear things that they’re being taught.”

The students whom God brings to the school in Dumfries crave the environment Lisa, Chris, and their team have created. The school is strictly hybrid: they meet every other Saturday and complete online classes in between on-campus meetings. On Saturdays, students come from local areas and from as far as south of London - an eight-hour trip both ways. They have twenty-nine students, and their first class is graduating in May. “The students who want to be here, He’s showing them individual ways to make it work, which is really powerful,” Chris says.

With the support of our Charis World Outreach partners, more and more Charis graduates are going out into the world, making disciples, and living their destinies. By saying yes to supporting the Charis mission, you are helping students say yes to God’s calling and become His plan A.
